

Benjamin M. Lehman
Associate

"Divorce and custody disputes are stressful. Add litigation to the mix and it can become very overwhelming. It takes compassion along with knowledge of the law and meticulous attention to detail to provide clients with effective representation and assure them that they will make it through."

BENJAMIN LEHMAN 2024

Pittsburgh family lawyer Benjamin M. Lehman delivers effective yet empathetic representation in complex equitable distribution and asset division cases.

Easing the Tension

Understanding the emotional and financial concerns at play in divorce proceedings, Ben always strives to meet clients where they are, listen and help them determine their goals and next steps. He guides clients through the legal process, seeking to alleviate stress while working through difficult equitable distribution and asset division issues.

Enhancing the Legal Community

Promoting and improving the legal community have been focuses for Ben since he was a law student, serving as president of the Family Law Society and participating in the Family Law Clinic at Duquesne University School of Law. Today, as an associate, he addresses the most pressing issues impacting young attorneys as a member of The Legal Intelligencer's Young Lawyer Editorial Board. Ben also takes an active role in the Pennsylvania and Allegheny County bar associations as a member of several committees and a participant in the ACBA Young Lawyers Division.
